

"A tramp, going by the name of English, spent a week among the citizens of Saskatoon and vicinity, before it was found out he was a fraud. He just got out in time to escape hard measures at the hands of the settlers round here. He reported being a farmer's delegate from Ontario, and that he with five others, had procured a outfit in Moose Jaw and were going to visit all places of interest in the territories. Knowing of course a good place when he sees it, he found out what he wanted, a suitable location to place about 30 families whom he represented—in his mind. It turned out he had walked from Moose Jaw to Bonington, sponging his board and lodging. While there, he told a terrible "tale of woe" and was given money to bring him to Saskatoon on the train, at which place he changed his tune considerably, and represented himself in quite a different light, leaving a board bill behind him. We could advise all with whom he comes in contact to give him a wide berth."

THE U. S. AND CANADA.

Thirty years ago the attitude of American statesmen towards Canada was one of friendly tolerance. Canadians were regarded by the people of the northern states as a kindred community having rights as free men which other free men were bound to respect.

With the close of the civil war there came a marked change inimical to this country,—a spirit of dominating aggressiveness not to be mollified by concession or subdued by logic, marked assertion of power, and a pronounced rejection of the principles of universal brotherhood upon which the Republic was supposed to have been founded.

Possibly American politicians may exult in the growth of such sentiment, but the change indicates a loss of principle which must ultimately prove disastrous to the United States. A dispassionate observer can see no difference between the spirit in which the United States seeks to drive the shipping of a weaker community off the high seas, and the tyranny against which the American Colonists successfully revolted in 1776. We mention the Behring Sea matter merely as one of many evidences of a growing disregard among American politicians either for their own avowed principles or for the rights of others.

Yet it would be unjust to the public opinion of a great people to assert that a general sentiment really prompts or endorses this policy. The cause is to be found in party exigencies, or, to go still further back, to the determination of the party out of office to get in and of the party in office to stay there. The whole policy and the prompting cause are signs of weakness as well as manifestations of strength; of weakness because principle is sacrificed to gain the votes of a class who are least worthy to influence the foreign or domestic policy of a state,—the votes of men habitually swayed by passion or prejudice. But to be conscious of an evil that threatens us avails little unless we can meet it with some countervailing influence.

In immediate contact with a great and growing power manifestly disposed to assert the right of might, Canada's statesmen should sink minor issues incidental to party politics, reduce public expenditure to a basis commensurate with the country's means, rather than with the desires of greedy camp-followers, afford moderate protection for home industry, but also make Canada a cheap place to live in, and thereby secure the settlement of her wide Territories by an industrious and energetic population loyal to British freedom.

The men in charge of public affairs have a difficult and delicate duty to perform in relation to the neighboring Republic. Obviously the government should avoid with scrupulous care any position not based upon the clearest principles of international justice. Nay, we should keep well within our rights lest we afford our neighbors an excuse for assaulting them under cover of protecting their own. A great and growing peril without may be what Canada just now needs. But, that peril must be heeded, not with swaggering braggadocio, but with sober forethought. Above all we need unity, self-reliance, and a vigorous development of productive resources.

HUDSON BAY COMPANY'S REPORT.

The report of the Hudson's Bay Company for the past year shows a profit of $24,402, to which must be added $23,860 brought forward. They recommend a dividend of 6s. 6d. per share, which will absorb $32,500, leaving $17,763 to be carried forward. They regret that, in consequence of the dull state of trade both at home and abroad, the fur sales held in January and March brought lower average prices than those of last year. A heavy fall in the price of beaver and musquash, and in some of the finer descriptions of fur usually brought for the Russian market, more than counterbalanced an advance in the prices of marten and mink, and seriously affected the results of the fur trade business. During the past year it was decided to close several of the company's posts, which were not showing good results, and where the outlook seemed unsatisfactory. On the other hand, new sales have been opened at Fort Wilfrid, the principal Canadian port of shipment from the Northwest on Lake Superior; at Lethbridge, where the Alberta coal mines are situated; and at Nelson, in British Columbia, the centre of the important Kootenay mining district. Acting under the instructions of the board the new commissioner, Mr. Chipman, is effecting very considerable reductions in the expenses of management, rendered possible now that improved means of communication bring many of the company's posts more under the control of the central authority at Winnipeg. It is estimated that by changes already decided upon a reduction of £10,000 in annual working expenses will be accomplished. The board have given their careful attention to the question of dividing the accounts of the fur trade from those of the sale shops, and they have been able to make arrangements for separating these two branches of the company's trading posts report for bearing animals as being more plentiful than for some years past, and there is a material increase in the volume of business at the sale shops.

RECTIFICATION OF PARLIAMENT.

The council of the Canadian Institute offers to award one thousand dollars for prize essays on the problem of rectifying our electoral and parliamentary system, with a view to averting many evils now connected with it.

Dr. Sandford Fleming has been devoting his attention to this matter and desires to awaken an interest in the subject. The prize competition is extended to all persons of whatever country, on equal terms, while the council appeals to every member of the institute and to all thoughtful persons within the Dominion for their assistance in obtaining a complete solution of the problem, addressing Canadians as being specially interested in the good government of their own land. The council proposes to use the $1,000 placed at its disposal by a generous friend, by giving an award of not less than $500, and others proportionate to the merits of the works submitted, for the best workable measure (bill or act of parliament) which, if made law, would give the whole Canadian people equal representation in parliament and each elector due weight in the government through parliament. The council of the institute accordingly invites essays on electoral representation and the rectification of parliament, accompanied by a draft bill applicable to countries with a parliamentary system similar in general features to that of Canada. These essays will be received up to the first day of July, 1893.

THE SMALL POX OUT-BREAK.

It is among the possibilities that the scourge of small-pox may become general throughout this country. Already the city of Victoria is in quarantine. There are several cases in Vancouver and New Westminster; a number in Calgary, and it is reported that the disease has broken out among Indians in the vicinity of Virden.

Every precaution should be taken to guard against a possible breaking-out of small-pox. It is as liable to happen here as elsewhere, and what to do in supposing such a thing should happen is a nice question.

—The Council of the town of Medicine hat has taken timely steps in this matter. No passengers are allowed to land from the west. It is certain that the disease will be carried on the train. The other night we observed two carloads of Chinese from the coast.

We do not raise the question with an intention to alarm. Forewarned is forearmed. Supposing that tomorrow a case of small-pox should be found among the Indians in the vicinity of the town, what steps would be taken to prevent its spread? Supposing that, instead of an Indian, a white man should be taken down in one of our hotels, what would be done with him? Supposing further that instead of one case we should have half a dozen to deal with, where are our facilities? Have we a nurse in town who would undertake the care of small-pox patients? And if so, have we an isolated building that would make an improvised hospital?

We earnestly hope that these possibilities may not become realities. But in the name of common sense and for the safety that is assured by timely precaution, let us endeavor to protect our town from the inroads of a scourge that bids fair to become prevalent.

REPRESENTATION ON THE EXECUTIVE.

The Saskatchewan Times last week commenting on the resignation of Mr. Cayley as member of the Executive, attempts to abuse Mr. Haultain because, forsooth, at the resignation of Mr. Clinkskill, he (Mr. Haultain) did not show due courtesy to representatives of this (the Saskatchewan) district; for he "entirely ignored the other representatives of the Saskatchewan district and gave a second representation in the executive to Alberta."

At the close of last session Mr. Haultain brought down an amendment to the School Act that was not satisfactory to Mr. Clinkskill, who was supported in this matter by the majority of the members for Saskatchewan. As a matter of principle, therefore, we would hardly expect to find Mr. Haultain filling the place made vacant by Mr. Clinkskill's resignation with one of these members.

Mr. Haultain selected Mr. Cayley as a member of the Executive for his reason: He (Mr. Haultain) was departing for Ottawa, and it was necessary to have someone on the committee who thoroughly understood the workings of the License Act, and Cayley was most conversant with the Act for it was he who brought in the Bill.

The Saskatchewan Times goes on to say:

As a district we have vested rights and these rights should not be trampled under foot. We believe in the principle of justice and equity, and for that reason claim that each district should have a representative on the Executive Committee. No excuse by Haultain will palliate his unfair treatment of the members of this district upon the resignation of Mr. Clinkskill.

On the formation of an executive at the commencement of last session of the Assembly several of the members, among them Messrs. Haultain, Oliver, McKay and Ross, was of the opinion that the executive should consist of but three members in order that no precedent should be created as to representation on that committee.

What, we ask, are the vested rights of the Saskatchewan district that are being so ruthlessly trampled under foot? Under the present system expenditure in each district is controlled by the individual member, and it makes not the slightest difference to any district whether it has four representatives on the executive or none at all.

It is to be supposed in the selection of members of the Executive that Mr. Haultain went on the presumption of brains, and it is a bad policy to introduce sectionalism in our Northwest politics and to say that, ability or no ability, each district should have representation on the Executive.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Marquis of Lorne is not a brilliant success in British politics. He was defeated at last election. He has suffered defeat again. It is greatly regretted as Lord Lorne would be an earnest advocate of the interests of Canada.
